- The image shows a template for a 5-page spread. It consists of five vertical panels of equal width. The first and last panels are the outer edges, and the three middle panels are separated by vertical fold lines. A central vertical line runs through the middle of the spread. The template includes three types of boundaries: a blue line for the safe area, a magenta line for the trim line, and a black line for the bleed area. The safe area is a narrow margin inside the trim line. The trim line is the outer edge of the magenta border. The bleed area extends to the black line, which is the outermost border. The text and legend are centered in the second panel from the left.
